Dr. Luke Nichter The Nixon Tapes

President Charlie Guidry introduced his professor and friend, Dr. Luke Nichter professor of history at Texas A&M University Central Texas. Dr. Nichter spoke to the club about his research on the Nixon Tapes. He co-authored a book titled "The Nixon Tapes 1971-1972" with Douglas Brinkley. Dr. Nichter gave the behind the scenes description of the research. He discussed a meeting with Dr. Henry Kissinger, who was a little leery of giving information for the book.

Between February 1971 and July 1972, President Nixon secretly recorded 3,700 hours of his phone calls and meetings across the executive offices. To date, about 3,000 hours of those tapes have been declassified, released and made available to the public. These tapes are being transcribed by individual researchers and scholars. In 2005 Dr. Nichter started to digitize the tapes. Four years later he launched nixon tapes.org as a public service. Since then he has been transcribing the tapes and making them available to the public, producing more of them than anyone else.
